This is not about forcing people to buy browsers other than Microsoft. This is about inferior products being pawned off on unsuspecting consumers.

The average computer owner has little or no knowledge of how their computer operates - they shouldn't have to it should be designed to work for them.

Bill Gates puts out inferior products before they are perfected. He has the money to hype his products. Unsuspecting consumers have to go through hell using his inferior products.

Hard working quality minded smaller companies interested in coming out with superior products don't have the funds or connections to get their products included in the sale of a computer.

The general public will benefit because small businesses with superior products are benefiting because Bill Gates has been called on the carpet for unscrupulous tactics.

Please realize Bill Gates is not interested in quality product. His ONLY interest is quantity profits at any expense.
